A Tribute to Duke Nguyen Browning (Duc Ngoc Nguyen), ’85

by Professor Myrl Duncan

More than any other student I have taught in 32 years at Washburn University School of Law, Duke personified the infinite resiliency of the human spirit. As a teenager in Vietnam during the war, he worked as a military photographer and in 1975 faced certain death at the hands of the victorious North Vietnamese. With ingenuity and luck, and dodging mortar shells, he managed to escape on one of the last helicopters to leave Saigon. Eighteen years old, with only a few years of formal education and knowing only a few English words, he made his way to the United States.

With the help of those who recognized his native intelligence, he received equivalency education and graduated from college. By way of the Council on Legal Education Opportunity he arrived at Washburn, where his unshakeable optimism, hard work, determination and pure grit won him the love and affection of the law school community. When he became a naturalized U.S. citizen during his first year, his classmates carried him from the courthouse on their shoulders — and then presented him with an apple pie. He dreamed of being able to use his law degree to help tend to the legal needs of the Vietnamese community in Houston, Texas, and he simply refused to let the obstacle of a bar exam in his second language stand in his way. He went on to become a successful attorney and businessman in Houston. Duke enriched — even changed — the lives of those who knew him, and he brought great credit to Washburn Law.
